

Recycled Sari Wrapped Storage Baskets

Following the knockout success of our previous sets of 3 storage baskets (PROK009) we're delighted to introduce this selection from our Fair Trade suppliers in Bangladesh. Already suffering from rising sea levels, it's great that we can support these suppliers through sourcing these recycled, practical products!

Traditionally used to carry rice from the fields to market, these practical baskets are handwoven with 100% natural seagrass in Vietnam.

Made with strong, flexible handles by our Fair Trade supplier; Mai Vietnamese Handicrafts, they collapse to half their size for easy stacking and a variety of uses.

Hogla Baskets from Bangladesh

Handwoven with the local Bangladesh seagrass known as “hogla”, these beautiful baskets are incredibly strong and will last for years. Plenty of uses around the house - even the cats like them! Sustainable, non-plastic and Fair Trade!

Recycled rag rugs and mats

Rag rugs used to be made in Britain, in the olden days (not so long ago) when we didn't waste things that could be used again. As late as the 1960s, the rag n' bone man could still sometimes be seen in our streets on his horse and cart, tinkling his bell and shouting 'rag 'n bon-es' as he went along (remember Steptoe & Son?). Rags – any form of clothing – were a valuable commodity, used for such purposes as carpet underlay, mattress stuffing and seats on trains and buses.

India still has a massive rag trade, involving, it is estimated, about 3 million rag-pickers or 'raddi-wallahs' as they are known. They are a familiar sight in India's towns and cities, touring the streets just as the rag 'n bone men used to do in Britain (though tricycles are a more common sight than horses...). Households are usually paid according to the amount they collect, giving them an incentive to do so, as opposed to simply sending to landfill. However, an enormous amount of textile waste still ends up in landfill, and as India's economy grows, with its burgeoning middle class, this amount is spiralling. Collecting rags and other recyclables from landfill sites is almost an industry in itself. After sorting the waste, the ragpickers sell it to local recycling or scrap centres, who sell it on in bulk, for instance to the artisans who make rag rugs.

Bestselling range

The textile industry accounts for approximately 10% of global greenhouse gas emissions, making it a major contributor to climate change.

Handwoven by local artisans near Delhi, these rag rugs (right) provide income for Karm Marg, the home for street children which we support.

Great for students!

Made from leftover fabric remnants from the garment industries, rag rugs are affordable, last for years and can be machine washed.

We've tried for ages to source these and now at last the artisans we work with have transformed the basic rag rug so they are geared to specific colourways. Selling well since they arrived in September 2021, they come in two sizes.

As we continue on our quest to combat climate change, we are prioritising products which make use of discarded, waste materials. These mats do just that, as well as providing an income for many artisans who would otherwise struggle to find work.

Doormats

Our supplier Aspiration in New Delhi was founded 40 years ago by Padam Kapoor, who was passionate to retain Indian handicraft skills and traditions. Now as we try to find a use for all the waste that litters the streets and clogs up India's rivers and countryside, Aspiration's artisans are turning their skills in new directions to turn this waste into attractive, exciting new designs.

Cushion inners

ECOHF18

Our new ECO cushion fillers are made from recycled clear PET plastic bottles that are cleaned and re-processed into chip form, then processed again into compressed 275 kilo bales. The fibre is then run through another machine and blown into corovin cushion ticks which are made from a Polypropylene fabric. On average a cushion pad has around the equivalent of 15 x 500ml plastic bottles inside it.

Using these inners will make your cushions look much more attractive on display.

Molten glass & teak root sculptures

In a village in the hills above Ubud in Bali is a glassblowing workshop. In one corner two women are preparing broken sheet glass for recycling. Close by four men rush to and fro heating the glass until it glows, then deftly blowing it into an extraordinary range of shapes.

Elsewhere other artisans are preparing discarded fragments of teak root. The result is a collection of beautiful and unique pieces, the glass melted to hug the natural contours of the root on which they perch, frozen in time like Dali's molten watches...
