Egg shakers

These shakers are hand-painted in Bali using a special technique. The wood used is from the fast-growing albesia tree, which grows to maturity in only 7 or 8 years. It's often considered a 'weed' by local people, growing up everywhere whether it's wanted or not. The shakers are filled with seeds.

Note: Water-based paints, no lead included.

Save the rainforest!

The Amazon rainforest faces serious threats, and along with it, its unique wildlife. A fifth of it has already been lost to cattle ranching, agriculture, development, logging and oil exploration. Deforestation brings more CO2 into the atmosphere, increasing global warming, which in turn increases the risks of fires and a drying out of the forest. It's vital we do all we can to save it.

Musical instruments from Bali

From jembe drums and thunder spring drums to Australian didgeridoos, from shakers to bamboo flutes, glockenspiels and rainsticks, whistles, panpipes and thumb pianos, there is something here for everyone.

Many of these instruments are made with sustainable, locally-sourced bamboo and often feature the vibrant dot design art that is so well known from the aboriginal cultures of Australia.

Wind instruments

Bamboo grows quickly, requires no irrigation, pesticides or fertilisers, sequesters carbon, and inhibits soil erosion, making it one of the most sustainable materials there is for craft production.

Percussion instruments

The craftsmen and women of Bali have a wealth of skills and techniques – you’ve already seen flutes, djembes, shakers and rainsticks. We finish here with a selection of glockenspiels and chimes, and a very popular coconut thumb piano – another use this versatile and sustainable raw material is put to.
