

Molten glass & teak root sculptures

In a village in the hills above Ubud in Bali is a glassblowing workshop. In one corner two women are preparing broken sheet glass for recycling. Closeby four men rush to and fro heating the glass until it glows, then deftly blowing it into an extraordinary range of shapes.

Elsewhere other artisans are preparing discarded fragments of root. The result is a collection of beautiful and unique pieces, the glass melted to hug the natural contours of the root on which they perch, frozen in time like Dali's molten watches...

Hanging terrarium globes

A different form of terrarium - hanging globes.

These unique hanging items bring an innovative way to add a natural decorative element to the home. Fill with different combinations of plants and even add little personalised decorations like pebbles, shells, crystals or wood. Follow a season or festivities theme maybe.

There's no reason why these can't be used to contain things other than plants too! Pot Pouri, wine corks, pebbles, fairy lights - the possibilities are endless when decorating with these glass globes.

We have 4 different sizes ranging between 10-20cm which include jute rope.

Note: Plants are not included!

Seaside whitewash windchimes

From a small workshop near Ubud, Bali, run by Titi Mertha (far left), who has supplied us for many years. We loved hearing how much our orders support her and her family. It is important to everyone at Shared Earth that we make a massive improvement to artisans' lives. A single order can go a long way for our suppliers and that means so much to us!

Bamboo is easily renewable and can play an important part in tackling climate change. As a raw material it is excellent both for environmental and economic sustainability in rural areas. It takes up little space, grows to maturity in under 5 years, and can be harvested regularly. For products like these chimes, it's ideal, as it grows freely in the woods and empty spaces close to our producer's workshop. This is in a village near Ubud, Bali; they already live a sustainable lifestyle, growing their rice and other crops close by, and the sale of windchimes allows them to maintain the long-term sustainability of their community.

Iron bells and chimes

Made by artisans in New Delhi, India, out of recycled wrought iron, these bells are a wonderful addition to our metal chime range. The scrap iron is shredded so that less energy is used in the melting process. After the iron is melted, it is then cooled and solidified into these carefully shaped bells and chimes. Wrought iron is a good recycled metal as it has a low carbon content and the recycle process saves energy whilst retaining original quality.

Aspiration International works for the welfare of artisans and their families all over India, by promoting and developing cottage industries, improving social and economic conditions and providing fair wages to the artisans.

Catch your dreams!

Dreamcatchers are a Native American Indian tradition, supposed to protect you from bad dreams, whilst letting the good dreams through; they slip through the hole in the centre, down the feathers to the sleeping person below. Ours are made in Bali, and our purchases keep several families in work each year.

Dreams that make a difference

The crochet work for our dreamcatchers is produced by women in a remote mountain village in Bali, providing a much needed supplementary income to their main employment in agriculture.

Dreams of shifting white

Bright white pools in the dappled afternoon sun, our beautiful white dreamcatchers shift in the unseen breeze of the forest.

What passing reveries will they snare in their gentle nets before the sunrise?

Paper mobiles

These mobiles are handmade in Thailand using traditional techniques. 'Saa' paper comes from the bark of the Mulberry tree, which every year peels off, and can be used to make paper. It's a totally sustainable material; if not used, it would simply go to waste.

Quirky hanging animal planters from a small workshop in Bali. Hand carved albesia wood, hand-painted, water-based paints.

If used outdoors, for the paint-work to last longer, they should be put in a sheltered spot and brought inside in the winter.

Sandstone Buddhas and Ganeshas

These sandstone buddhas and gods are made in a small workshop in rural Bali – they're great both indoors and out, are well priced and extremely popular. We recommend them.

Sandstone is a great eco-friendly option as it needs only a fraction of the energy needed to create man-made stone like concrete or brick.

NUG2312

If left outdoors, these sandstone cast Buddhas and other pieces will retain their brightness for years. Eventually they will probably grow a rich living patina of moss and lichen, blending in with other garden plants.

They can of course also be used indoors.

Incense Holders

We've bought from Nugraha Stone for many years, and in 2023 we paid for a new roof for their workshop. We also provided them with a new concrete mixer (see pic), corless and impact drills, a rotary hammer, duster and mini spray guns, a recoil hose and a stone grinder.

Fairtrade rubber and gardening gloves

These gloves are made from Fair Trade latex and natural rubber harvested by small-scale farmers in Sri Lanka. The farmers earn a premium from the exporters, who have also invested in education, medical support and correct rubber tapping knives. They also provide training to the farmers on the best ways to care for the trees, and manage the land they grow on.
