rice husk cup

NEW RANGE !

Our new 400ml coffee cups contain no plastics and are BPA and toxin free, so nothing nasty to leach into your drink.

Unlike bamboo cups (at least all we are aware of) our rice husk cups are genuinely biodegradable as they do not contain melamine, which is a plastic.

34 amazing in house designs unique to Shared Earth.

They are dishwasher and microwave safe. Look after your cup and it will last for years.

A major challenge for small producers in developing countries is finding ways of using their traditional skills to create new products. They are far away from where their products will eventually be sold. One of our key aims is to help them to understand fashion trends in Europe.

Raffia baskets from Madagascar

Sambava 1

Named after the city at the centre of the vanilla growing region of north eastern Madagascar.

A key role of Fair Trade companies is to work with artisans in developing countries to help them source fresh markets for traditional crafts. We are delighted to have designed this collection of raffia baskets, place mats and coasters with basket makers in Madagascar.

Grouped in sets of complimentary colours (produced using natural dyes), these vibrant, bold, and contemporary designs look beautiful in any home. For their size, they're also very well priced.

Madagascar is one of the world's poorest nations.

Sometimes described as the world's sixth continent, on account of its unique flora and fauna, Madagascar is struggling to tackle many environmental, biodiversity, food security and development challenges.

Shared Earth is proud to be investing in the people of Madagascar, with your support. Together we can help to make a difference.

Mango wood is a fast growing wood and therefore a sustainable material. It takes approximately 7 to 10 years to grow which is much less than comparable hard woods. The texture and finish of carved mango wood items is rich and beautiful.

The combination of mango, sheesham, papi and tun wood works wonderfully together in these products with their contrasting colours. Satish Dhmani of Saharanpur, an artisan who is a specialist in joint wood, makes these products with his small team.

These woods take between 8 and 15 years to grow and non are endangered or protected species, other than the sheesham wood (see next page)

Sheesham wood - the puzzle box makers of Saharanpur

Working in the half-light of a darkened room away from the heat of the afternoon, the jigsaw rattles and knocks noisily as the master puzzle box maker deftly rotates a block of wood back and forth.

When he is done, the puzzle boxes move upstairs where a second craftsman waxes and polishes the boxes until they gleam.

Sheesham is a type of rosewood. It's a protected species but limited harvesting is allowed on recognised plantations to protect the livelihoods of the many artisans who rely on it. Detailed documents are produced to ensure CITES regulations are adhered to.

Shared Earth is working with all our Indian suppliers to move away from Sheesham wood and onto more sustainable timbers such as mango wood, while supporting the artisans during the transition period.

Sheesham wood

Sheesham wood is a beautiful and luxurious wood which we buy from top class carvers.

It takes between 15 and about 20 years to grow to maturity (c.f. many hardwoods which take 80-90 years).

Production of these wooden handicrafts is usually organised in family groups and machinery is minimal.

Intricate 'Jali' carving, brass inlay and high quality are a hallmark of the products you see in these next few pages.

Like you, we at Shared Earth are concerned to ensure that the sheesham wood products we buy are made from wood that is sustainably sourced. All three of our Indian suppliers have the Vriksh Legality Assessment and Verification Scheme certificate to confirm that the boxes, furniture, and artistic handicraft products they make use legally procured wood from managed forests where trees are replanted.
