

Sandstone Buddhas and Ganeshas

These sandstone buddhas and gods are made in a small workshop in rural Bali – they're great both indoors and out, are well priced and extremely popular. We recommend them.

Hand carved Buddha figures

These handcarved Buddha figures are made in Bali made from Albesia, a fast growing tree and sustainable source of wood. The aesthetic approach of blending colour with gold lacquer is typical of Balinese art.

In his roadside workshop in the hills north of Tegalalang in Bali Nyoman Suarmu works calmly, ignoring the occasional passing motorbikes. His eyes dart up and down constantly. Checking the master carving, he alters the path of the chisel as he chips away.

Watching a master craftsman at work is a joy.

In a world of plastic moulded objects these carvings represent a more personal, thoughtful and sustainable way of producing art, in keeping with the Buddha figures themselves.

Sandstone Buddhas

If left outdoors, these sandstone cast Buddhas and other pieces will retain their brightness for years. Eventually they will probably grow a rich living patina of moss and lichen, blending in with other garden plants (our MD comments “one in my garden for 12 months – as good as new”. We’ll report further next year!). They can of course also be used indoors.

Tibetan Prayer Flags

Our prayer flags are made by Tibetan refugees living in India.

Prayer flags are colourful rectangular cloths often found strung along mountain passes and paths high in the Himalayas. The five colours represent the five elements: sky, air, fire, water, and earth.

The flags are not intended to carry prayers to a deity, rather they are used to promote peace, compassion, strength and wisdom.
