

NEW RANGE

Fairmail greetings cards

We're delighted to present this new range from Fairmail Cards, a social enterprise which produces photo cards with the pictures taken by underprivileged Peruvian teenagers. The photographers receive a generous commission which they invest in their education. They're eco-friendly too, with the cards printed in the UK, and peel-easy labels used to bind the card and envelope, instead of single-use cellobags. Size: 15 x 15cm.

This is the future for greetings cards - no cellophane bag, biodegradable or otherwise, just a peelable sticker which holds envelope and card together. The paper is FSC-certified and a percentage of profit is donated to support wildlife charities. All cards are 15 x 15cm

Twig crayons

These twig crayons are taken from the branches of the Tamarind tree, which is common in Thailand and S.E.Asia. The trees are grown for their fruit. After it has been harvested, the branches are cut and left to dry in the sun. They are then drilled and the pencil colour inserted, though not to the full length of the crayon as this is not possible. A 'waste' product, great to teach young children about the natural world.

Paper Gift Bags & Wrap

Handmade gift bags and wrap from India, made with recycled newspaper, and from Thailand, handmade with saa paper, the ultimate sustainable product. It's made from the bark of the saa or mulberry tree, which sheds its bark each year after the rainy season; so the process doesn't harm the tree at all.
